PROCLAMATION

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

In generations past, American classrooms had a selective version of our history – a history that told only part of the American story. However, since the latter half of the 20th Century we as a country have striven to give not only our students but all Americans a more fuller and richer story of our past. A history that is broader and deeper with themes and characters that enrich our lives and give a truer history of our Nation over the past few hundred years. Black History Month provides a special opportunity for not only our teachers and schools to celebrate this ongoing process, but also visitors to historical sites to focus on the many African Americans whose lives have shaped our common experience. You can tell a great deal about a country and a people by what they deem to be important enough to remember. What history and actors do we put forth to tell our common history? One could suggest that we learn even more about a country by what it chooses to forget – its mistakes, its disappointments, and its embarrassments. In some ways, Black History month is a clarion call to remember. We must remember the history of John Lewis crossing Selma's Edmund Pettus Bridge while being forced to endure “bloody Sunday” beatings just to have the right to vote. But now, here is the 21st Century, our leaders are targeting diversity and equity and are censoring information websites, museums and National Parks and other historic places about the ongoing struggle for Black equality, or erase Black stories entirely such as the removal this month of a slavery memorial at George Washington's President's House in Philadelphia, an exhibit that honored the lives of the nine people held there who were enslaved by President Washington. These efforts and others, whitewashes our past. — and it should encourage all peoples to push back.

As Mayor and Town Council of Brentwood, we embrace all of our shared history, so that during Black History Month and throughout the entire year, we want all the diverse strands of our story to be told. In this way our Children at Thomas Stone and other schools will know our Nation's past and know that they have a role to play in creating the future.

Now, Therefore, I Rocio Treminio-Lopez, as Mayor and on behalf of the Council do hereby proclaim February 2026, as Black History Month and we encourage everyone to celebrate and remember with us.
